

GTA VICE CITY STORIES Without Human Verification !!HOT!!

[no more human verification] Password we are not like them, we are not alike them, we are not the same as them. Sure, the "Grand Theft Auto" video game series has been a huge hit, but this experiment with a new "social networking" interface has always been a curious development. Today, though, we know that the long-mooted "Vice City" game, which is the fifth in the series, will be hitting shelves today. So what about this new interface, which very much looks to be the Xbox version's Live interface? Well, we have a few things to say about it, but we are not like them. We are not alike them. We are not the same as them. How in the world does it work? It turns out, the developers of the game took the Live interface idea, and did two things that will make it a lot more user-friendly, and we're happy about that. First, the interface has been updated for those of us who are not always in front of a computer (and who also have to be connected to the internet). The new interface not only now integrates mobile, it also takes up less space than the old interface. For most of you, you won't even notice the change. The other change that we love is the fact that you don't have to install any software. I know, I know, you've read that before. And it's true, too. You don't need to install any software, nor do you need the Live service (if you choose not to join up). You click the "Xbox Live" button and you're ready to go. So, since you don't install the software, how does it work? Well, the interface has a little icon for every game in the service, which takes you directly to that game and lets you play away (not that we have a problem with that). If you are playing in a session with another Live user, you're seeing a little plus sign in the bottom-left corner, and vice versa. If you are playing with someone who isn't on Live, you can use your new-fangled interface or you can chat away with a text box right in the middle of your video game. The game options screen is also pretty slick, and you can get all the information you need, just by clicking on the information you want. In the first screenshot on the left, we see
